HOOTIE IS ON SCHEDULE

Hootie Ingram dreamed about this very day some 10 years ago.

It was after the 1959 season that he deserted high school coaching to enter the collegiate ranks. And he set a goal . . . to become a college head coach.

Ingram figured his apprenticeship should last a decade. During that period he hoped to rub shoulders with some of the nation's bright, young and successful head coaches, priming himself for the day when he could field his own team.

When Coach Cecil (Hootie) Ingram arrived on the campus last December to hold a press conference on his appointment as new Clemson coach, it didn't take him long to find out about the Clemson IPTAY Club. IPTAY president Chris Suber, center, and Carroll Atkinson, Jr., club vice president, presented Ingram with a number of new memberships.

Ingram picked his spots. He got his foot in the door at Wake Forest and stayed a year. Then, in succession, he spent three years each at Virginia Tech with Jerry Claiborne, at Georgia with Vince Dooley and at Arkansas with Frank Broyles.

The new coach watched, listened, learned and sprouted some new ideas of his own.

On Claiborne, Ingram says: "He's the most dedicated coach to the game that I've seen. He's not going to play anybody who is going to outwork him. And he's a fine organizer of a football program."

On Dooley: "He is quite and easy going. Vince always kept his cool. He doesn't panic. He supervises practice, but gives a free hand to his assistants. He has the traits of some of the great leaders, the great generals we've had in the past."

On Broyles: "He was coaching football the way I thought it should be done. There isn't a person in the country who has put more innovations into the game both offensively and defensively than he has. He has endless energy."

With all this exposure during his adult life, to go with his growing up in the locker room at the University of Alabama and then playing with the Crimson Tide, Ingram attained the "very exacting standards" Clemson president Dr. Robert C. Edwards said was demanded when the successor to Frank Howard was chosen.

"There was no one available who more filled these requirements than Coach Ingram," Edwards said.

One of the first things Ingram recognized upon arriving on the campus was the Clemson tradition. "I know Clemson has a rich tradition. I've been across the field from them on four different occasions — and it's the type tradition where they want to play football and the fans want them to play football and everyone wants to win. And that's what it's all about," Ingram said.

Ingram surmised he was "ready to do this job" at Clemson. "I think the athletic program here is on a firm foundation and I just want to continue building on it. Our players will go out on the field to win."

Ingram was a coach "without players" when he first arrived at Clemson last December. School was out for Christmas vacation and all students were home on the semester break. But he was busy lining up his staff.

When the players did return Ingram met with them as a group and then individually. He gave them the word on what he expected of them and he listened if they had anything to say.

"I'm an advocate of both the running and passing game," Ingram observed. "When you have a strong running game, it cannot work without the other team also being worried about a pass, and the passing game works much better when there is the threat of a strong run present.

"I've always liked to throw the football," the coach emphasized, "maybe because I've always coached the secondary and know how hard it is to defend."

Ingram's assistants will tell you he is meticulous, devoted to detail and an organizer supreme.

The Clemson coaching staff, some being holdovers from the Howard staff and some being completely new to the environment, went through a period of experimentation with the "Ingram way" during the 20 days of spring practice.

"We've spent enough time on our passing game to make people think we're going to keep it in the air," Ingram offered. "We've worked real hard on passing and the reason is, I don't want to throw the football if we are going to make mistakes doing it. If you throw at all, you have to spend a lot of time on it."

The intricacies of his passing game are different, and Ingram will employ the option plays, a device he deems essential to get his running backs outside against the sophisticated defenses.

Ingram's innovations with the Clemson offense and defense will be an advantage to the Tigers in the early going. One thing on the minus side is the youth on the team, with just seven seniors and many sophomores up from the 5-0 Cub team.

This is not supposed to be Clemson's year in the Atlantic Coast Conference. But by generating enthusiasm to a new high pitch; and by turning hard work into a joy, a few surprises might be sprung during the course of the season.

Hootie Ingram received a royal welcome when he came to Clemson. He visited numerous Clemson clubs in South Carolina and adjacent states getting to know Tiger followers, but one of the warmest "glad you're here" functions occurred at the Clemson House during a luncheon honoring State Senator Edgar A. Brown. Here Brown, center, who is also president of the Clemson Board of Trustees, and Clemson president Dr. Robert C. Edwards give Ingram one of his typical welcomes.

Get to Know Clemson; It's Quite an Education

In behalf of Clemson University, I warmly welcome each of you to our beautiful campus and to Memorial Stadium for today's game.

Clemson has a proud tradition in athletics, as it does in academic affairs and in public service. Clemson is enhancing and extending this tradition as it enters a new era for varsity sports. The Athletic Department's dynamic approach to its future is exemplified by this attractive and informative program and by the other innovations visible at the stadium. Clemson athletics enter the Decade of the Seventies with eagerness and confidence.

We at Clemson share the enthusiasm and pride of all South Carolinians in celebrating our state's 300th anniversary. South Carolina, one of the original colonies, has made major contributions to this country's dynamic growth. The State has a proud and historic tradition. Many of its people have been leaders who helped shape this nation's history and development.

To all our visitors, especially those from out-of-state, I suggest you get to know the State of South Carolina. It is a State of unlimited opportunity.

Just as South Carolina enjoys a significant role in the nation's history, Clemson University is a truly vital contributor to the educational and economic development of the State. As a state-supported, land-grant University, Clemson is dedicated to improving the quality of life for all citizens through its educational, research and public service programs.

A pioneer and innovator in many areas, Clemson University, its distinguished faculty, researchers and scientists are tackling many of the world's most pressing problems. The Clemson scientists began investigating the blight of our environment years before pollution became a national concern. Our agricultural engineers are providing agriculturists with modern methods to harvest their crops. Other Clemson scientists are devising better means of providing more and different types of food for over-populated areas throughout the world.

In other areas, Clemson researchers are engaged in many health-related projects, space exploration activities and urban problems, and are attacking on a broad front some of the textile industry's most critical problems.

These are just a few of the reasons that make Clemson University so unique and so exciting.

Other important ingredients are a dedicated faculty and staff, a student body that faces today's problems both responsibly and positively, and the 35,000 alumni who put to good practice the quality education and training they received at Clemson.

I suggest that during your visit here today you take the opportunity to look us over.

Get to know Clemson; it's quite an education.

The IPTAY Story

Beginning September a year ago, and ending this past August, members of IPTAY contributed more money into the Clemson scholarship club than ever before, even surpassing the record set a year earlier.

This past September 1st started the 37th year of IPTAY and probably no other group of people has done more for collegiate athletics anywhere.

Thousands of boys have received an education through IPTAY which otherwise would not have been possible. And the need for additional memberships increases each year.

During the 36th year of operation the club has one of its largest memberships on record with 7,034 regular members; 1,469 $100 Gold Card members, 28 $250 members, 38 $500 members and 18 who have contributed $1,000 to the club.

IPTAY was started — and still functions — with one purpose in mind, that is, to finance athletic scholarships at Clemson. Not one single penny contributed during the past 36 years has been used for any other purpose. All contributions are tax deductible.

From the records available, there were 185 people who were members of IPTAY during that first year of 1934-35. Over a third of these are now deceased, but better than 60 per cent of those still living are members today and a fifth of them are Gold Card members.

The late Dr. Rupert H. (Rube) Fike was the father of IPTAY. It was his idea that something should be done to support athletics at Clemson. His thought was being churned around when the Tigers were at one of their lowest depths of football. The team had won only seven games, while losing 17 and tieing five in three years.

The beginning of IPTAY was an adrenaline to football and the initial success experienced was more than anticipated. For the next eight years, the football teams had break even seasons or better. And the sixth season after IPTAY was born, the Tigers went to their first bowl game. Five other post-season classics were to come Clemson's way in the next 19 years.

While football was to be the main beneficiary of IPTAY funds, Clemson's other athletic teams have also benefited from the program as evidenced by the conference championships won in other sports, not to mention the numerous All-America and All-Conference honors won by individuals.

IPTAY put Clemson athletics on the map — to stay.

Clemson's Mission is Larger, More Complex

Clemson University is located in the northwest corner of South Carolina, but its educational, research and public service programs extend from the red hills of the Blue Ridge Mountains to the sandy coast of the Atlantic Ocean.

Founded as one of the nation's land-grant institutions, Clemson opened in 1893 with 15 faculty members, 446 students, four buildings, two barns and six silos.

Today, Clemson University is the center of scientific, technological and liberal education in the state.

Enrollment has grown to some 7,600 young men and women attending main campus classes and the two-year centers in Greenville and Sumter. This enrollment includes about 1,000 graduate students and 1,500 coeds. The faculty numbers more than 600 and the main campus has 55 major buildings.

Teaching and research at Clemson University cover studies as down to earth as soil and plant analysis and as far out as celestial navigation.

Instructional programs are offered through 40 academic departments under ten academic divisions: College of Agriculture and Biological Sciences, College of Architecture, College of Education, College of Engineering, College of Forest and Recreation Resources, College of Liberal Arts, College of Industrial Management and Textile Science, College of Physical and Mathematical Sciences, School of Nursing and the Graduate School.

Pioneers in environmental research, Clemson scientists and engineers currently are investigating a wide range of nationally-important projects, from ceramic bone and teeth implants to oxygen consumption in the brain, from a disposable glass container to water and air pollution.

The research and academic know-how at Clemson University work as catalytic agents to the entire economy of South Carolina and the nation through the Agricultural Extension Service, the Agricultural Experiment Stations, the Professional Development Program and the Office of Industrial and Municipal Relations.

In addition to Clemson's educational, physical and enrollment growth, another significant trend is the steadily improving quality of students.

President Robert C. Edwards proudly reports that members of the 1970 class are among the best prepared of any group ever admitted to Clemson. As a result of this improving proficiency, the percentage of freshmen who complete their work and re-enroll for their sophomore year continues to rise.

For the fall of 1970, 80 per cent of the freshmen who enrolled in 1969 re-enrolled for their second year. Fewer than ten per cent of 1969's freshmen failed to qualify to return, the majority of non-returnees being absent for non-academic or personal reasons.

Clemson University has accomplished its mission to a greater degree than founder Thomas Clemson ever dreamed, says President Edwards.

"Yet the need for education, especially scientific and technological education, is greater today than ever before," he says. "Clemson's mission, unchanged in essence, is therefore larger in magnitude and more complex in scope than ever before.

"True to the mission Mr. Clemson set for it, this University will continue to provide teaching, research and public service at the highest level of quality its resources will support."

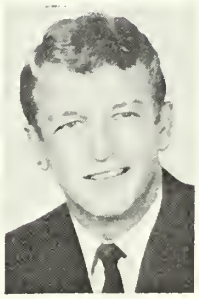
1970-71 BASKETBALL OUTLOOK

Taylor (Tates) Locke
Head Basketball Coach

Bill Clendinen
Assistant Basketball Coach

George Hill
Assistant Basketball Coach



Cliff Malpass
Freshman Basketball Coach

The 1970-71 Clemson basketball season will be a year of adjustment and experimenting for new Tiger head coach Taylor (Tates) Locke and his three-man staff of Bill Clendinen, George Hill and Cliff Malpass. Locke will depend heavily on seven members from last year's Clemson freshman club.

Gone is sharp-shooting guard Butch Zatezalo, who lead the Tigers in scoring the past three seasons and paced the ACC twice.

The Tigers not only lost Zatezalo's scoring, but center Richie Mahaffey, forward Ronnie Yates and forward Greg Latin all bid adieu to Clemson.

Two starters do return for the Tigers, guard Dave Thomas and forward Dickie Foster. Thomas, who will probably be a starter in the backcourt this season averaged 11.6 points per game last season, while Foster averaged 8.0 points and 7.4 rebounds per game.

Guard John Coakley, forwards Paul Holzshu and Jack Ross, return with center Pete Weddell.

Height, which the Tigers have badly needed for the past few seasons, will arrive in the form of Dave Angel, 7-0, and 6-11 John Williams.

Ron Fenwick, the top scorer on the 1969-70 Cub team, has been groomed to take Zatezalo's guard spot. Fenwick pumped in 26.5 points per game last year to set a new Clemson scoring record for the freshman team.

In Memoriam

JAMES H. (JIM) WEAVER

March 29, 1903 - July 11, 1970

The memory of a man who gave his life to athletics will be perpetuated by the organization he was instrumental in establishing and then serving as its head for 16 years.

James H. (Jim) Weaver, the first and only commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference, died suddenly of a heart attack July 11 while attending a meeting of the Collegiate Commissioners Association, of which he was its chairman, in Colorado Springs, Colo.

A scholarship to be known as the Jim Weaver Memorial Graduate Scholarship has been initiated by Weaver's widow, Kate, and daughter, Florence, and will be awarded annually to an outstanding ACC athlete who has distinguished himself by his academic record and leadership qualities.

The conference has made a $4,000 donation to the scholarship, $500 in the name of each member institution. Other donations can be made through the conference office in Greensboro. The conference office will administer the scholarship.

Athletic Director Frank Howard

FRANK HOWARD
Athletic Director

Frank Howard stepped aside last December 10th as Clemson head football coach, thus ending the longest tenure in the nation.

The man who had 165 victories to his credit decided 30 years was enough pacing on the sidelines, so he dropped part of his dual role and kept the one labeled athletic director.

During his stay of 39 years on the coaching staff, nine as line coach to Jess Neely, Howard roamed the continent of North America, as well as that of Europe, and spread the good word on his life's work—football—and at the same time, putting in a good word for Clemson.

Howard's victories number him as the 19th leading coach in collegiate football (see table in opposite column). He won more Atlantic Coast Conference championships than anyone else and during his stay at Clemson, he saw 52 different coaches come and go at the other ACC schools.

Howard played in one post season bowl game as an undergraduate at Alabama, went to one as a Clemson assistant coach and then carried six of his own teams to season-ending classics.

The 61-year-old Howard also found time to coach in nine post-season all-star games, and even he is afraid to estimate the number of coaching clinics he has lectured at.

In fact, there isn't much Howard hasn't done—except sit in the stands and watch the Clemson Tigers play a football game—which he'll do this fall.

Responsibilities: As athletic director, is in charge of intercollegiate athletic program at Clemson.

CECIL (HOOTIE) INGRAM
Head Football Coach

Ingram Is 18th Head Coach At Clemson

Cecil Wayne (Hootie) Ingram, Jr., became Clemson's 18th head football coach last December 17th, one week after Frank Howard retired from active coaching.

Ingram, who, like Howard, graduated from the University of Alabama, started out in high school coaching and when he took his first collegiate assistantship at Wake Forest in 1960, set a goal of becoming a head coach in 10 years. Just as planned, he made it.

Following one year with the Deacons, he toiled and listened three years at Virginia Tech, another three at Georgia and a final trio at Arkansas before accepting the Clemson offer.

Ingram found, in his words, "not many great football players, but more than our share of good ones" at Clemson. He made the best of 20 spring practice days.

Now, with the first season to call their own, Ingram and his staff are anxious to put their ideas to work, to recruit their first complete freshman team and to continue the Clemson tradition — a solid football program.

Appointment. Joined Clemson staff Dec. 17, 1969. Came to Clemson from University of Arkansas staff.

Responsibilities: Serves as head football coach. Is in charge of entire football program.

Coaching Experience: Head coach at Bradenton (Fla.) High School one year; head coach at Tuscaloosa County (Ala.) High School three years; assistant coach one year (1960) at Wake Forest University; assistant coach three years (1961-62-63) at Virginia Tech; assistant coach three years at University of Georgia (1964-65-66); assistant coach three years (1967-68-69) at University of Arkansas. 1970 will be first year on Clemson staff.

Personal Information: Born — Tuscaloosa, Ala., Sept. 2, 1933. Graduated from Tuscaloosa High School. Lettered 3 years in football, 3 years in basketball, 3 years in baseball, 1 year in track. College — University of Alabama, graduated with BS degree in education in 1955. Lettered 3 years in football, 3 years in baseball. Named All-Southeastern Conference defensive back in 1952 when he led nation in interceptions (10) and yards returned (163). These are still Alabama and SEC records. Received MA degree in school administration from Alabama. Married — Toni Snider of Tuscaloosa, Ala., Jan. 27, 1955. (Mrs. Ingram earned undergraduate and masters degrees at Alabama. Children—2 daughters, Robin, born Dec. 19, 1955 (9th grade) and Lane, born April 21, 1963 (2nd grade); and one son, Cecil, III, born Aug. 10, 1959 (6th grade).

Bowl game Participation: 2 as player (1953 Orange, 1954 Cotton); 4 as an assistant coach (1965 Sun and 1967 Cotton with Georgia; 1969 Sugar and 1970 Sugar with Arkansas).

THE CITADEL SERIES

Clemson and The Citadel bridge a gap this afternoon that has widened to a 16-year void. Even though the Tigers and Bulldogs have met 28 times previously, 25 of these came between 1909 and 1936.

After that '36 meeting, there was an 18-year span of inactivity between the two state institutions. In 1948, with Clemson just one game away from an undefeated season and a bid to the Gator Bowl, the Tigers journeyed to Charleston to dedicate Johnson Hagood Stadium.

Wingback Ray Mathews entered the game six points behind Choo Choo Justice in the Southern Conference scoring race. The sophomore sensation scored all three Clemson touchdowns as the Tigers won, 20-0, and Mathews ended up with 78 points on the year.

The two clubs held a two-year contract for the 1953 and 1954 seasons, with the first game being played in Charleston. Clemson retrieved this one, 34-13.

A year later, the two teams played on one of the most miserable days ever seen in Memorial Stadium.

Some say there were 1,500 on hand who braved the sleet and rain, but some also remember Coach Frank Howard turning around and waving at everyone individually in the stands.

The first quarter lacked ony 20 seconds from being over before Clemson got its first score and this came on a blocked punt. The Tigers built up a 20-0 first half lead, but before the next 15 minutes were passed, Clemson had racked up four touchdowns. The final count, 59-0.

Ken Moore ran only five times against the Bulldogs, but gained 152 yards.

In the overall series, Clemson leads with 22 wins, The Citadel has recorded five victories and there has been one tie. The Tigers have a six-game winning streak going by virtue of triumphs in 1932-33-35-36-48-53-54.

Coach "Red" Parker, now in his fifth season as Bulldog head coach, brings a team into Death Valley today which commands respect. He carried the Cadets to a 7-3 season in '69.

Despite the graduation of a large percentage of proven football players, Parker and his staff feel this could be the year for the Bulldogs. Depth and experience still are rather scarce, but Parker feels this potentially is his best team.

ACC Comments: The Value Of Discipline In Athletics

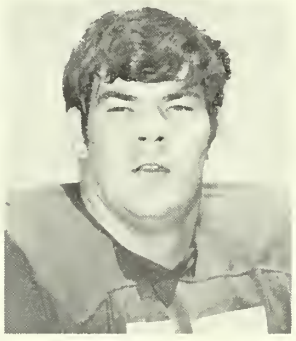
JACK WHITLEY, N. C. State Defensive Back: Without discipline in athletics, there could be no team sports. Each athlete who wants to participate in any team activity, has to give up much of his individuality and become a part if it is to be a winner. But the individual has to have his personal discipline to become a part of a team. His training habits, conduct on and off the field, attitude, and his physical and mental approach are vital not only to his own self discipline, but will reflect directly on the part he plays on his team. As Coach Earle Edwards has told us many times, if enough of us beat our individual opponent on assignments during a game, our team will win. But if we don't have the personal discipline to fulfill our assignments, our team won't have much chance of winning.

JACK WHITLEY

TONY BLANCHARD

TONY BLANCHARD, North Carolina End: It was here at Carolina that I really learned about discipline. I learned it on the practice field under Coach Vic Spooner, running pass patterns and blocking. When you become a disciplined player in practice, then the things you learn become instinctive and you do those things on Saturday afternoon—even when it's late in the fourth quarter and you are tired. The discipline I have learned in football has helped me in other ways, too. I think that by applying this discipline to my everyday life, I will have an easier time attaining the goals which I have set for myself.

JIMMY POSTON, South Carolina Defensive Tackle: In order to be a good athlete, you have to be able to discipline yourself. Your coaches will work you hard on the field during practice, but off the field, you're on your own to take care of yourself and remain in shape to give your best performance. Without a certain amount of discipline, on and off the field, you can't become a great athlete. I am sure that most of the great performers in any sport have a tremendous amount of self discipline. Discipline and teamwork are synonymous, since you have to discipline yourself to perform your particular assignment and sometimes sacrifice to help your team.



JIMMY POSTON

DICK BIDDLE

DICK BIDDLE, Duke Linebacker: To evaluate the importance of discipline on a football team is an easy question to answer. The success of a football program depends on two ideal situations. One, being the type talent on a team and two, the correct use of this talent. Discipline falls in the second category. Without proper discipline, a team and its players cannot operate successfully. Certain rules and guidelines should be set by both the staff and players and should be strictly enforced. All players should be treated equally with no reference to their individual ability. The team with a strict code of discipline will usually succeed and without cliques, disputes or favoritism.

STEVE BOWDEN, Wake Forest Halfback: I didn't know the value of discipline in athletics until I came to college. I have found that it pays great dividends to discipline yourself both on and off the field. I didn't realize the effect that discipline could have on the complexion of a football game. Discipline, both mental and physical, wins football games. Another type of discipline that should be important to all athletes is discipline in the classroom. It is a big job to attend college and do well, but it becomes even larger when athletics are involved.

STEVE BOWDEN

JOHN DYER

JOHN DYER, Maryland Linebacker: Discipline is closely related to desire and it is difficult to have one, yet not the other. The willingness to sacrifice good times for hard work in an effort to improve yourself is a good example. A disciplined ballplayer will have a good influence on his teammates since a high standard is set by his work. Because an athlete is disciplined, he increases his breaking-point, mentally and physically. Under any circumstance he is able to perform harder, longer and better. A type of confidence is gained. He'll never quit. You can knock him down but not out.

PAUL REID, Virginia Linebacker: Discipline seems to have a bad connotation in contemporary society, but it brings great rewards to the athlete. I view discipline as sacrifice, mental awareness, and a desire to "pay the price." All aim at achieving the ultimate goal . . . victory. The complexity of football strategy today demands the utmost in discipline from its participants. Football is a team game where individuals mold and work together to form a solid unit of efficiency. Mental mistakes in football are more costly than physical ones and when players perform in an undisciplined manner and fail to execute their assignments, unity and efficiency are destroyed. Adherence to discipline results in self satisfaction gained through victory. The greatest feeling in the world is to be part of a winner. Without discipline, this feeling is unachievable.

PAUL REID

RAY YAUGER

RAY YAUGER, Clemson Tailback: Discipline is the little difference that makes a team great instead of just good. Every athletic team must have a certain amount of discipline, but I feel a great team must have a little more discipline. A person is taught discipline throughout his life, but no where is discipline needed more than in a college football game. If one player out of eleven does not discipline himself to carry out his assignments, the entire team will suffer. There are numerous examples of discipline in college football. Most important, the individual player must discipline himself to keep in good condition and work hard to get in better condition. Also, the college football player must be willing to discipline himself to make numerous sacrifices for the benefit of himself and the team.

The people in this building are giving away atomic "secrets."

They're letting people spy on huge nuclear reactors.

They're revealing the secrets of the atom to all who come in.

And they're not stopping there.

They're taking people from the past to the future. Through display chambers filled with sight and sound.

They're telling people how electricity is made. How it's going to change our world.

And they're doing all this free of charge. At the Keowee-Toxaway Visitors Center from 10 to 5 on weekdays and 1 to 5 on Sundays.

Visit this place and its beautiful picnic area. And prepare to be intrigued.

Top Photography Facilities ...

Facilities for photographers, including ample camera space, dark room access and on-the-spot pictures of the game make Clemson's press box one of the most talked-about of any anywhere on the circuit.

Movie crews filming the game for Clemson and the visiting team have a 27-foot open section right in the middle of the second deck of the press box which will easily accommodate six movie tripods.

One flight up is a 35-yard long "front row" for still cameras and those filming for TV. No one is too far off the 50-yard line with the angle afforded from this top deck.

Photographers, as well as sportswriters covering Clemson's home games, have become accustomed to the third floor of the press box. Behind the row of cameras is the famous buffet served for those covering the game where the finest of food is enjoyed from the "Top of the Valley."

Chief photographer Charles Haralson, and his assistants, Tom Shockley, Hal Smith and Bill Osteen, are on hand for two reasons: to shoot game films for the athletic staff; and to assist visiting photographers covering the game.

Harry Durham and Jim Burns head up the Clemson Communications Center and devote their time seeing that all runs well, and at the same time, always willing to lend a helping hand.

During the week many requests for game action film, video taped interviews, stills and other special photo needs are filled for newspapers, radio and TV stations.

Game action is shot during the first half of each home game by a staff photographer and a set of pictures (five or six prints) is furnished to any news media request before the end of the game.

This rapid service is done through a Fotorite machine, a rapid print processing, and is the only one in use in the Atlantic Coast Conference and one of the few in the nation used as such.

During the past eight seasons nearly 3,300 photos have been given free to the press by the process, thanks to the closely-knit crew of the Communications Center.

Network In 17th Year . . .

The Clemson Football Network enters its 17th year in 1970 with an expanded format which will give network listeners a better "inside look" on the Tigers.

The network, which is one of the largest university-operated networks in the nation, averaged 57.7 stations a game last fall. With the type enthusiasm exhibited in the spring toward Clemson football, a network as large, or larger, is anticipated this fall.

Jim Phillips and Bruce Buchanan, both from the staff of WFBC Radio and Television in Greenville, will again handle the play-by-play and color respectively, and Banks McFadden, former Clemson All-America, will add his commentary with halftime interviews. Either Bill Garrison or Bill Lynn of the WFBC engineering staff will serve as producer-director to give the network the best possible professional touch.

Added this year for the first time will be a pre-game as well as a post-game show by Clemson's new football coach, Cecil (Hootie) Ingram.

The network will sign on five minutes earlier than usual and stay on the air 10 minutes following the wrap-up period when Phillips and Ingram will comment on what to expect in the game, then just a few minutes away; as well as presenting quick observations of the game just completed.

Phillips, now sports director of WFBC Radio and TV, has 17 years of broadcasting behind him. He came from his native Ohio where he was affiliated at various times with stations in Alliance, Ashland and Lima. Before coming with the Clemson network, Phillips did the play-by-play for the Kent State University Network.

Buchanan is general manager of WFBC Radio and is well-known in sports broadcasting circles throughout the Carolinas. He had done a variety of high school sports for many years. He has been closely associated with Clemson athletics for nearly two decades.

Clemson network listeners can expect an accurate, colorful and professional description of each game. Phillips, Buchanan and McFadden will triple-team microphones in covering every corner of South Carolina with Tiger football.

JOE B., age 17, is about to make one of the most important decisions of his life.

He's thought about quitting high school for sometime, although graduation is only one year away. Poor grades reflect Joe's disinterest in his school work and he continues to fall further behind in his studies. Frustration.

Joe doesn't plan to go to college and can't see how the subjects he is studying will be of any real benefit to him anyway. Besides, there's an opening for a full-time man at the local filling station where Joe works on weekends.

That settles it. No more high school for him.

Joe B. is a fictitious student. But the circumstances which led to the end of his high school career and entry into the "drop-out" ranks are very real to many ex-South Carolina high school students who have quit for similar reasons.

Innovative programs designed to keep students in school who are not academically suited for the regular curriculums are among the most important business of a young state agency whose offices are located at Clemson University.

The South Carolina Research Coordinating Unit for Vocational Education (RCU) has as one of its priority projects, the development of pre-vocational programs and vocational education programs for disadvantaged youth as a means of lowering the state's drop-out rate. These programs involve vocational instruction oriented towards a specific job or group of jobs. Courses would be offered to students as early as the ninth grade.

"We believe these programs will encourage many students to stay in school, graduate and become employable, productive citizens within their county or elsewhere," says Dr. John H. Rodgers, RCU director.

Vocational Education:
No Longer A Poor Stepchild

By John L. Allen
News Bureau Editor

"Early exposure to training which the student can realize will be a definite benefit in earning good wages after graduation will perhaps give many potential drop-outs the needed incentive to remain in school," says Dr. Rodgers.

The new programs will emerge from the bulk of educational materials being amassed by the RCU staff from several sources, including a highly-developed computer-based information system known as ERIC, an acronym for Educational Resources Information Center.

"We are obtaining curriculum materials, reports of projects, and other documents to be used directly or modified in similar programs in South Carolina," says Dr. Rodgers. "We can try new ideas on a pilot basis and from there set up demonstration centers and attempt to get these better practices adopted throughout the state as quickly as possible."

The unit's work in this area is part of its overall purpose to improve instruction in vocational education programs at all levels throughout the state.

Dr. Rodgers sees a definite need for innovations in vocational education programs. He says that certain teaching methods in some schools haven't changed in five or ten years or even more.

The current emphasis on new programs for disadvantaged students is in keeping with the basic philosophy of vocational education which Dr. Robert H. White, assistant director, explains this way: "Not all of the students coming through high school are going to college. Assuming that they graduate from high school, how will they earn a living?

"A student can't come out of high school from the normal curriculums and support a wife," says Dr. White. "Quite frankly, he can hardly support himself.

"He needs to have some employable skills of the type where he can go into a business and say, 'now look, I can do this and I'd like a job', and they can start in and work up from there."

The four-year-old ERIC system helps the Research Coordinating Unit to keep on top of the latest research findings in many areas of education. Research reports from around the nation are fed into ERIC and reproduced on small sheets of film called microfiche.

"ERIC is an invaluable resource in our work to locate curriculum materials and techniques which have been successfully used to teach disadvantaged youth elsewhere," says Dr. White. "The system serves everyone in all aspects of education."

Since its establishment in July, 1966, the RCU has operated as a cooperative venture of Clemson and the Office of Vocational Education of the State Department of Education. The South Carolina unit and those in other states were made possible by the 1963 Vocational Education Act.

This legislation made federal funds available for an RCU in any state that wished to submit a plan for establishment of a unit. A three-year, $127,780 grant from the U. S. Office of Education was used to establish the state RCU at Clemson. It now operates on state funds augmented with federal funds administered by the State Department of Education.

The RCU services are available to state institutions, school districts, individual schools and teachers, and others interested in research in vocational education. The staff will provide assistance in the design and preparation of research proposals, and in conducting actual research.

"Vocational education has a new image," says Dr. White. "It is growing and becoming more and more accepted. It is no longer a poor stepchild. It is accepted."

Get a status symbol that carries some weight.

The time is past when people thought of a truck as strictly a workhorse.

In fact, Chevy pickups are being used for so many personal and leisure time activities that they've become a kind of symbol for a new life-style.

It's easy to see why.

Our pickups combine the luxury and utility today's on-the-go generation wants. You can order such conveniences as an automatic transmission, power steering and power brakes.

Even air conditioning, bucket seats and carpeting.

And with it all you get the practicality of a "trunk" up to 8½ feet long. Try that out for size on your next shopping trip. Or vacation trip. Or football outing.

The man to see is your Chevrolet dealer. He'll show you more reasons why Chevy pickups are so popular.
